NYB gallery proudly features Kwak's project which embraces a range: site-specific "Space Drawing" spending about two weeks in Carillon Point, Kirkland, WA in response to the space. This work is "an invitation for viewers to walk into space and experience a body of new pictorial reality. As they step into, their visual perception is expended to another dimension of time and space". "Sculptural Drawing" that the artist's searching images in the unconscious mind by starting with air draw in space with gaffer tape. This is not only her approaches to three-dimensional forms of the material but also the accumulated layers of time built on individual works as well. "Drawing on Paper" has been produced within as a trace of the intimate conversation between the consciousness and unconsciousness that opens the new chapter of private communion closely connected to the "Sculptural Drawing".
